"All are needed by each one,
Nothing is fair or good alone."

SOON after the first appearance of Karma in the columns of The Open Court, several applications to translate the story were received, and the requests granted. Some of these translations have appeared, others may still be expected. A few translations were made without the author's knowledge. A German edition was published by the Open Court Publishing Co. Altogether one Japanese, one Urdu, three German, and two French renderings are at present in the author's possession. It is possible that the story also exists in Icelandic.¹ Tamil, Singhalese, and Siamese versions. A Hungarian edition is in preparation.

A Russian translation was made by Count Lee Tolstoy, who recommends the story to his countrymen and sums up his opinion as follows:

"This tale has greatly pleased me both by its artlessness and its profundity. The truth, much slurred in these days, that evil ¹An Icelandic translation has been made by the Rev. Matthías Jochumson of Akureyri, Iceland, and must have appeared in the Icelandic periodical of which he is editor, but we do not know whether it has appeared in book form.

can be avoided and good achieved by personal effort only and that there exists no other means of attaining this end, has here been shown forth with striking clearness. The explanation is felicitous in that it proves that individual happiness is never genuine save when it is bound up with the happiness of all our fellows. From the very moment when the brigand on escaping from Hell thought only of his own happiness, his happiness ceased and he fell back again into his former doom.

"This Buddhistic tale seems to shed light on a new side of the two fundamental truths revealed by Christianity: that life exists only in the renunciation of one's personality—'he that loseth his life shall find it' (Matt. x. 39), and, that the good of men is only in their union with God, and through God with one another—'As thou art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us' (John xvii. 21).

"I have read this tale to children and they liked it. And amongst grown-up people its reading always gave rise to conversation about the gravest problems of life. And, to my mind, this is the very best recommendation."

From the Russian the story Karma was translated, together with several other sketches, by E. Halpérine-Kaminsky, under the title Imitations, and the work was published under Tolstoy's name at Paris by the Société d'éditions littéraires et artistiques.¹

Either from Tolstoy's Russian version or from the French translation, an abbreviated German translation was made by an author who signs himself "j," and this appeared in the Berliner Evangelisches Sonntagsblatt, May 2, 1897 (No. 18, pp. 140-141). Here, too, the story goes under Tolstoy's name.

While the evangelical Sunday paper reproduces Karma as a story that inculcates Christian principles, the late Professor Ludwig Büchner, famous as the author of the leading materialistic work, Force and Matter (Kraft und Stoff), translated Karma from the English under the impression that he had before him some mysterious ancient Buddhist document, for he calls it "an Indian tale from the English of the P. C." Apparently he mistook the signature P. C., over which the story first appeared, for an abbreviated title of some forgotten Pâli Codex or Pundit Collection, and at any rate a Pagan Curiosity. It appeared in Ethische Kultur, the organ of the German Ethical Societies, Berlin, June 1 and 8, 1895 (Vol. III., Nos. 22 and 23).

Having appeared under Tolstoy's name in French and in German, the story continued in its further migrations to sail under the famous Russian author's name. An enterprising American periodical entitled The International Magazine published an English translation in Chicago, and it is curious that the office of this journal was in the very same block with that of The Open Court Publishing Company. So the story had completed its rounds through Russia, Germany, and France, and had returned to its home in the far West.

Since the story had gained currency under Tolstoy's name, the author (having previously had correspondence with him) wrote to Posnia, and Tolstoy replied expressing his regret at the misunderstanding saying of Karma :

" It was only through your letter that I learned it had been circulated under my name, and I deeply regret, not only that such a falsehood was allowed to pass unchallenged, but also the fact that it really was a falsehood, for I should be very happy were I the author of this tale. It is one of the best products of national wisdom and ought to be bequeathed to all mankind, like the Odyssey, the History of Joseph, and Shakyamuni."

Karma appeared first in book form in Japan, where The Open Court Publishing Company brought out at Hasegawa's three successive editions on crêpe paper, illustrated in colors by Kwason Suzuki. In the present edition the Japanese illustrations, which were retouched by Eduard Biedermann, are reproduced in black and white, and we hope that the artistic garb will do much to make the little tale attractive.

DÊVALA'S RICE-CART.

LONG, long ago in the days of early Buddhism, India was in a most prosperous condition. The Aryan inhabitants of the country were highly civilised, and the great cities were centres of industry, commerce, and learning.

It was in those olden times that Pandu, a wealthy jeweller of the Brahman caste, travelled in a carriage to Bârânasî, which is now called Benares. He was bent on some lucrative banking business, and a slave who attended to the horses accompanied him.

The jeweller was apparently in a hurry to reach his destination, and as the day was exceedingly pleasant, since a heavy thunderstorm had cooled the atmosphere, the horses sped along rapidly.

While proceeding on their journey the travellers overtook a samana, as the Buddhist monks were called, and the jeweller observing the venerable appearance of the holy man, thought to himself: "This samana looks noble and saintly. Companionship with good men brings luck; should he also be going to Bârânasî, I will invite him to ride with me in my carriage."

Having saluted the samana the jeweller explained whither he was driving and at what inn he intended to stay in Bârânasî. Learning that the samana, whose name was Nârada, also was travelling to Bârânasî, he asked him to accept a seat in his carriage. "I am obliged to you for your kindness," said the samana to the Brahman, "for I am quite worn out by the long journey. As I have no possessions in this world, I cannot repay you in money; but it may happen that I can reward you with some spiritual treasure, out of the wealth of the information I have received while following Shâkyamuni, the Blessed One, the Great Buddha, the Teacher of gods and men."

They travelled together in the carriage and Pandu listened with pleasure to the instructive discourse of Nârada. After about an hour's journey, they arrived at a place where the road had been rendered almost impassable by a washout caused by the recent rain, and a farmer's cart heavily laden with rice prevented further progress. The loss of a linch-

pin had caused one of the wheels to come off, and Dêvala, the owner of the cart, was busily engaged in repairing the damage. He, too, was on his way to Bârânasî to sell his rice, and was anxious to reach the city before the dawn of the next morning. If he was delayed a day or two longer, the rice merchants might have left town or bought all the stock they needed.

When the jeweller saw that he could not proceed on his way unless the farmer's cart was removed, he began to grow angry and ordered Mahâduta, his slave, to push the cart aside, so that his carriage could pass by. The farmer remonstrated because, being so near the slope of the road, it would jeopardise his cargo; but the Brahman would not listen to the farmer and bade his servant overturn the rice-cart and push it aside. Mahâduta, an unusually strong man, who seemed to take delight in the injury of others, obeyed before the samana could interfere. The rice was thrown on the wayside, and the farmer's plight was worse than before.

The poor farmer began to scold, but when the big, burly Mahāduta raised his fist threateningly, he ceased his remonstrances and only growled his curses in a low undertone.

When Pandu was about to continue his journey the samana jumped out of the carriage and said: "Excuse me, sir, for leaving you here. I am under obligations for your kindness in giving me an hour's ride in your carriage. I was tired when you picked me up on the road, but now, thanks to your courtesy, I am rested, and recognising in this farmer an incarnation of one of your ancestors, I cannot repay your kindness better than by assisting him in his troubles."

The Brahman jeweller looked at the samana in amazement: "That farmer, you say, is an incarnation of one of my ancestors? That is impossible!"

"I know," replied the samana, "that you are not aware of the numerous important relations which tie your fate to that of the farmer; but sometimes the smartest men are spiritually blind. So I regret that you harm your own interests, and I shall try to protect you against the wounds which you are about to inflict upon yourself."

The wealthy merchant was not accustomed to being reprimanded, and feeling that the words of the samana, although uttered with great kindness, contained a stinging reproach, bade his servant drive on without further delay.

THE JEWELLER'S PURSE.

THE samana saluted Dêvala, the farmer, and began to help him repair his cart and load up the rice, part of which had been thrown out. The work proceeded quickly and Dêvala thought: "This samana must be a holy man; invisible devas' seem to assist him. I will ask him how I deserved ill treatment at the hands of the proud Brahman." And he said: "Venerable sir, can you tell me why I suffer an injustice from a man to whom I have never done any harm?"

And the samana said: "My dear friend, you do not suffer an injustice, but only receive in your present state of existence the same treatment which you visited upon the jeweller in a former life. You reap what you have sown, and your fate is the product of your deeds. Your very existence, such as it is now, is but the Karma of your past lives."

"What is my Karma?" asked the farmer.

"A man's Karma," replied the samana, "consists of all the deeds both good and evil that he has done in his present and in any prior existence. Your life is a system of many activities which have originated in the natural process of evolution, and have been transferred from generation to generation. The entire being of every one of us is an accumulation of inherited functions which are modified by new experiences and deeds. Thus we are what we have done. Our 'Karma' constitutes our nature. We are our own creators."

"That may be as you say," rejoined Dêvala, "but what have I to do with that overbearing Brahman?"

The samana replied: "You are in character quite similar to the Brahman, and the Karma that has shaped your destiny differs but little from his. If I am not mistaken in reading your thoughts, I should say that you would, even to-day, have done the same unto the jeweller if he had been in your place, and if you had such a strong slave at your command as he has, able to deal with you at his pleasure."

The farmer confessed, that if he had had the power, he would have felt little compunction in treating another man, who had happened to impede his way, as he had been treated by the Brahman, but thinking of the retribution attendant upon unkind deeds, he resolved to be in the future more considerate with his fellow-beings.

The rice was loaded and together they pursued their journey to Bârânasî, when suddenly the horse jumped aside. "A snake, a snake!" shouted the farmer; but the samana looked closely at the object at which the horse shuddered, jumped out of the cart, and saw that it was a purse full of gold, and the idea struck him: "This money can belong to no one but the wealthy jeweller."

Nârada took the purse and found that it contained a goodly sum of gold pieces. Then he said to the farmer: "Now is the time for you to teach the proud jeweller a lesson, and it will redound to your well-being both in this and in future lives. No revenge is sweeter than the requital of hatred with deeds of good will.² I will give you this purse, and when you come to Bârânasî drive up to the inn which I shall point out to you; ask for Pandu, the Brahman, and deliver to him his gold. He will excuse himself for the rudeness with which he treated you, but tell him that you have forgiven him and wish him success in all his undertakings. For, let me tell you, the more successful he is, the better you will prosper; your fate depends in many respects upon his fate. Should the jeweller demand any explanation, send him to the vihâra³ where he will find me ready to assist him with advice in case he may feel the need of it."

BUSINESS IN BENARES.

TO corner the market of the necessities of life is not a modern invention. The Old Testament contains the story of Joseph, the poor Hebrew youth who became minister of state, and succeeded with unscrupulous but clever business tricks in cornering the wheat market, so as to force the starved people to sell all their property, their privileges, and even their lives, to Pharaoh. And we read in the Jâtaka Tales¹ that one of the royal treasurers of Kâsî, which is the old name of Bârânasî, made his first great success in life by cornering the grass market of the metropolis on the day of the arrival of a horse dealer with five hundred horses.

When Pandu the jeweller arrived at Bârânasî it so happened that a bold speculator had brought about a corner in rice, and Mallika, a rich banker and a business friend of Pandu, was in great distress. On meeting the jeweller he said: "I am a ruined man and can do no business with you unless I can buy a cart of the best rice for the king's table. I have a rival banker in Bârânasî who, learning that I had made a contract with the royal treasurer to deliver the rice to-morrow morning, and being desirous to bring about my destruction, has bought up all the rice in Bârânasî. The royal treasurer must have received a bribe, for he will not release me from my contract, and to-morrow I shall be a ruined man unless Krishna⁵ will send an angel from heaven to help me."

While Mallika was still lamenting the poverty to which his rival would reduce him, Pandu missed his purse. Searching his carriage without being able to find it, he suspected his slave Mahâduta; and calling the police, accused him of theft, and had him bound and cruelly tortured to extort a confession.

The slave in his agonies cried: "I am innocent, let me go, for I cannot stand this pain; I am quite innocent, at least of this crime, and suffer now for other sins. Oh, that I could beg the farmer's pardon whom, for the sake of my master, I wronged without any cause! This torture, I believe, is a punishment for my rudeness."

While the officer was still applying the lash to the back of the slave, the farmer arrived at the inn and, to the great astonishment of all concerned, delivered the purse. The slave was at once released from the hands of his torturer. But being dissatisfied with his master, he secretly left and joined a band of robbers in the mountains, who made him their chief on account of his great strength and courage.

When Mallika heard that the farmer had the best rice to sell, fit for delivery to the royal table, he at once bought the whole cart-load for treble the price that the farmer had ever received. Pandu, however, glad at heart to have his money restored, rewarded the honest finder, and hastened at once to the vihâra to receive further explanation from Nârada, the samana.

Nârada said: "I might give you an explanation, but knowing that you are unable to understand a spiritual truth, I prefer to remain silent. Yet I shall give you some advice: Treat every man whom you meet as your own self; serve him as you would demand to be served yourself; for our Karma travels; it walks apace though, and the journey is often long. But be it good or evil, finally it will come home to us. Therefore it is said :

‘Slowly but surely deeds
Home to the doer creep.
Of kindness sow thy seeds,
And bliss as harvest reap.’”

“Give me, O samana, the explanation,” said the jeweller, “and I shall thereby be better able to follow your advice.”

The samana said: “Listen then, I will give you the key to the mystery. If you do not understand it, have faith in what I say. Self is an illusion, and he whose mind is bent upon following self, follows a will-o'-the-wisp which leads him into the quagmire of sin. The illusion of self is like dust in your eye that blinds your sight and prevents you from recognising the close relations that obtain between yourself and your fellows, which are even closer than the relations that obtain among the various organs of your body. You must learn to trace the identity of your self in the souls of other beings. Ignorance is the source of sin. There are few who know the truth. Let this motto be your talisman :

‘Who injureth others
Himself hurteth sore ;
Who others assisteth
Himself helpeth more.
Let th’ illusion of self
From your mind disappear,
And you’ll find the way sure ;
The path will be clear.’

“To him whose vision is dimmed by the dust of the world, the spiritual life appears to be cut up into innumerable selves. Thus he will be puzzled in many ways concerning the nature of rebirth, and will be incapable of understanding the import of an all-comprehensive loving-kindness toward all living beings.”

The jeweller replied: “Your words, O venerable sir, have a deep significance and I shall bear them in mind. I extended a small kindness which caused me no expense whatever, to a poor samana on my way to Bârânasî, and lo! how propitious has been the result! I am deeply in your debt, for without you I should not only have lost my purse, but would have been prevented from doing business in Bârânasî which greatly increases my wealth, while if it had been left undone it might have reduced me to a state of wretched poverty. In addition, your thoughtfulness and the arrival of the farmer's rice-cart preserved the prosperity of my friend Mallika, the banker. If all men saw the truth of your maxims, how much better the world would be! Evils would be lessened, and public welfare enhanced."

The samana replied: "Among all the religions there is none like that of the Buddha. It is glorious in the beginning, glorious in the middle, and glorious in the end. It is glorious in the letter and glorious in the spirit.⁶ It is the religion of loving-kindness that rids man of the narrowness of egotism and elevates him above his petty self to the bliss of enlightenment which manifests itself in righteousness."

Pandu nodded assent and said: "As I am anxious to let the truth of the Buddha be understood, I shall found a vihâra at my native place, Kaushambî, and invite you to visit me, so that I may dedicate the place to the brotherhood of Buddha's disciples."

AMONG THE ROBBERS.

YEARS passed on and Pandu's vihâra at Kaushambî became a place in which wise samanas used to stay and it was renowned as a centre of enlightenment for the people of the town.

At that time the king of a neighboring country had heard of the beauty of Pandu's jewelry, and he sent his treasurer to order a royal diadem to be wrought in pure gold and set with the most precious stones of India. Pandu gladly accepted the order and executed a crown of the most exquisite design. When he had finished the work, he started for the residence of the king, and as he expected to transact other profitable business, took with him a great store of gold pieces.

The caravan carrying his goods was protected by a strong escort of armed men, but when they reached the mountains they were attacked by a band of robbers led by Mahâduta, who beat them and took away all the jewelry and the gold, and Pandu escaped with great difficulty. This calamity was a blow to Pandu's prosperity, and as he had suffered some other severe losses his wealth was greatly reduced.

Pandu was much distressed, but he bore his misfortunes without complaint, thinking to himself: "I have deserved these losses for the sins committed during my past existence.

In my younger years I was very hard on other people; because I now reap the harvest of my evil deeds I have no reason for complaint."

As he had grown in kindness toward all beings, his misfortunes only served to purify his heart; and his chief regret, when thinking of his reduced means, was that he had become unable to do good and to help his friends in the vihâra to spread the truths of religion.

Again years passed on, and it happened that Panthaka, a young samana and disciple of Nârada, was travelling through the mountains of Kaushambî, and he fell among the robbers in the mountains. As he had nothing in his possession, the robber-chief beat him severely and let him go.

On the next morning Panthaka, while pursuing his way through the woods, heard a noise as of men quarelling and fighting, and going to the place he saw a number of robbers, all of them in a great rage, and in their midst stood Mahâduta, their chief; and Mahâduta was desperately defending himself against them, like a lion surrounded by hounds, and he slew several of his aggressors with formidable blows, but there were too many for him; at last he succumbed and fell to the ground as if dead, covered with wounds.

As soon as the robbers had left the place, the young samana approached to see whether he could be of any assistance to the wounded men. He found that all the robbers were dead, and there was but little life left in the chief.

At once Panthaka went down to the little brooklet which was murmuring near by, fetched fresh water in his bowl and brought it to the dying man. Mahâduta opened his eyes and gnashing his teeth, said: "Where are those ungrateful dogs whom I have led to victory and success? Without me as their chief they will soon perish like jackals hunted down by skilful hunters."

"Do not think of your comrades, the companions of your sinful life," said Panthaka, "but think of your own fate, and accept in the last moment the chance of salvation that is offered you. Here is water to drink, and let me dress your wounds; perhaps I may save your life."

"Alas! alas!" replied Mahâduta, "are you not the man whom I beat but yesterday? And now you come to my assistance, to assuage my pain! You bring me fresh water to quench my thirst, and try to save my life! It is useless, honorable sir, I am a doomed man. The churls have wounded me unto death,—the ungrateful cowards! They have dealt me the blow which I taught them."

"You reap what you have sown," continued

the samana ; “ had you taught your comrades acts of kindness, you would have received from them acts of kindness ; but having taught them the lesson of slaughter, it is but your own deed that you are slain by their hands.”

“ True, very true,” said the robber chief, “ my fate is well deserved ; but how sad is my lot, that I must reap the full harvest of all my evil deeds in future existences ! Advise me, O holy sir, what I can do to lighten the sins of my life which oppress me like a great rock placed upon my breast, taking away the breath from my lungs.”

Said Panthaka : “ Root out your sinful desires ; destroy all evil passions, and fill your heart with kindness toward all your fellow-beings.”

THE SPIDER-WEB.

WHILE the charitable samana washed the wounds, the robber chief said: "I have done much evil and no good. How can I extricate myself from the net of sorrow which I have woven out of the evil desires of my own heart? My Karma will lead me to Hell and I shall never be able to walk in the path of salvation."

Said the samana: "Indeed your Karma will in its future incarnations reap the seeds of evil that you have sown. There is no escape from the consequences of our actions. But there is no cause for despair. The man who is converted and has rooted out the illusion of self, with all its lusts and sinful desires, will be a source of blessing to himself and others.

"As an illustration, I will tell you the story of the great robber Kandata, who died without repentance and was reborn as a demon in Hell, where he suffered for his evil deeds the most terrible agonies and pains. He had been in Hell several kalpas⁷ and was unable to rise out of his wretched condition, when Buddha appeared upon earth and attained to the blessed state of enlightenment. At that memorable moment a ray of light fell down into Hell quickening all the demons with life and hope, and the robber Kandata cried aloud: 'O blessed Buddha, have mercy upon me! I suffer greatly, and although I have done evil, I am anxious to walk in the noble path of righteousness. But I cannot extricate myself from the net of sorrow. Help me, O Lord; have mercy on me!'

"Now, it is the law of Karma that evil deeds lead to destruction, for absolute evil is so bad that it cannot exist. Absolute evil involves impossibility of existence. But good deeds lead to life. Thus there is a final end to every deed that is done, but there is no end to the development of good deeds. The least act of goodness bears fruit containing new seeds of goodness, and they continue to grow, they nourish the poor suffering creatures in their repeated wanderings in the eternal round of Samsâra¹ until they reach the final deliverance from all evil in Nirvâna.

“When Buddha, the Lord, heard the prayer of the demon suffering in Hell, he said: ‘Kandata, did you ever perform an act of kindness? It will now return to you and help you to rise again. But you cannot be rescued unless the intense sufferings which you endure as consequences of your evil deeds have dispelled all conceit of selfhood and have purified your soul of vanity, lust, and envy.’

“Kandata remained silent, for he had been a cruel man, but the Tathâgata in his omniscience saw all the deeds done by the poor wretch, and he perceived that once in his life when walking through the woods he had seen a spider crawling on the ground, and he thought to himself, ‘I will not step upon the spider, for he is a harmless creature and hurts nobody.’

“Buddha looked with compassion upon the tortures of Kandata, and sent down a spider on a cobweb and the spider said: ‘Take hold of the web and climb up.’

“Having attached the web at the bottom of Hell, the spider withdrew. Kandata eagerly seized the thin thread and made great efforts to climb up. And he succeeded. The web was so strong that it held, and he ascended higher and higher.

“Suddenly he felt the thread trembling and shaking, for behind him some of his fellow-sufferers were beginning to climb up. Kandata became frightened. He saw the thinness of the web, and observed that it was elastic, for under the increased weight it stretched out; yet it still seemed strong enough to carry him. Kandata had heretofore only looked up; he now looked down, and saw following close upon his heels, also climbing up on the cobweb, a numberless mob of the denizens of Hell. ‘How can this thin thread bear the weight of all?’ he thought to himself, and seized with fear he shouted loudly: ‘Let go the cobweb. It is mine!’ 4138

“At once the cobweb broke, and Kandata fell back into Hell.

“The illusion of self was still upon Kandata. He did not know the miraculous power of a sincere longing to rise upwards and enter the noble path of righteousness. It is thin like a cobweb, but it will carry millions of people, and the more there are that climb it, the easier will be the efforts of every one of them. But as soon as the idea arises in a man's heart: 'This is mine; let the bliss of righteousness be mine alone, and let no one else partake of it,' the thread breaks and he will fall back into his old condition of selfhood. For selfhood is damnation, and truth is bliss. What is Hell? It is nothing but egotism, and Nirvâna is a life of righteousness."

"Let me take hold of the spider-web," said the dying robber chief, when the samana had finished his story, "and I will pull myself up out of the depths of Hell."

THE CONVERSION OF THE ROBBER CHIEF.

MAHÂDUTA lay quiet for a while to collect his thoughts, and then he addressed the samana not without effort :

“Listen, honorable sir, I will make a confession : I was the servant of Pandu, the jeweller of Kaushambî, but when he unjustly had me tortured I ran away and became a chief of robbers. Some time ago when I heard from my spies that Pandu was passing through the mountains, I succeeded in robbing him of a great part of his wealth. Will you now go to him and tell him that I have forgiven from the bottom of my heart the injury which he unjustly inflicted upon me, and ask him, too, to pardon me for having robbed him. While I stayed with him his heart was as hard as flint, and I learned to imitate the selfishness of his character. I have heard that he has become benevolent and is now pointed out as an example of goodness and justice. He has laid up treasures of which no robber can ever deprive him,⁹ while I fear that my Karma will continue to linger in the course of evil deeds; but I do not wish to remain in his debt so long as it is still in my power to pay him. My heart has undergone a complete change. My evil passions are subdued, and the few moments of life left me shall be spent in the endeavor to continue after death in the good Karma of righteous aspirations. Therefore, inform Pandu that I have kept the gold crown which he wrought for the king, and all his treasures, and have hidden them in a cave near by. There were only two of the robbers under my command who knew of it, and both are now dead. Let Pandu take a number of armed men and come to the place and take back the property of which I have deprived him. One act of justice will atone for some of my sins; it will help to cleanse my soul of its impurities and give me a start in the right direction on my search for salvation."

Then Mahâduta described the location of the cave and fell back exhausted.

For a while he lay with closed eyes as though sleeping. The pain of his wounds had ceased, and he began to breathe quietly; but his life was slowly ebbing away, and now he seemed to awake as from a pleasant dream.

"Venerable sir," said he, "what a blessing for me that the Buddha came upon earth and taught you and caused our paths to meet and made you comfort me. While I lay dozing I beheld as in a vision the scene of the Tathâgata's final entering into Nirvâna. In former years I saw a picture of it which made a deep impression on my mind, and the recollection of it is a solace to me in my dying hour."

“Indeed, it is a blessing,” replied the samana, “that the Buddha appeared upon earth; he dispelled the darkness begotten by ill will and error, and attained supreme enlightenment. He lived among us as one of us, being subject to the ills of life, pain, disease, and death, not unlike any mortal. Yet he extinguished in himself all selfishness, all lust, all greed for wealth and love of pleasure, all ambition for fame or power, all hankering after things of the world and clinging to anything transitory and illusive. He was bent only on the one aim, to reach the immortal and to actualise in his being that which cannot die. Through the good Karma of former existences and his own life he reached at last the blessed state of Nirvâna, and when the end came he passed away in that final passing away which leaves nothing behind but extinguishes all that is transitory and mortal. Oh, that all men could give up clinging and thereby rid themselves of passion, envy, and hatred!”

Mahâduta imbibed the words of the samana with the eagerness of a thirsty man who is refreshed by a drink of water that is pure and cool and sweet. He wanted to speak, but he could scarcely rally strength enough to open his mouth and move his lips. He beckoned assent and showed his anxiety to embrace the doctrine of the Tathâgata.

Panthaka wetted the dying man's lips and soothed his pain, and when the robber chief, unable to speak, silently folded his hands, he spoke for him and gave utterance to such vows as the latter was ready to make. The samana's words were like music to the ears of Mahâduta. Filled with the joy that originates with good resolutions and entranced by the prospect of an advance in the search for a higher and better life, his eyes began to stare and all pain ceased.

So the robber chief died converted in the arms of the samana.

THE CONVERTED ROBBER'S TOMB.

AS soon as Panthaka, the young śāmana, had reached Kaushambî, he went to the vihāra and inquired for Pandu the jeweller. Being directed to his residence he gave him a full account of his recent adventure in the forest. And Pandu set out with an escort of armed men and secured the treasures which the robber chief had concealed in the cave. Near by they found the remains of the robber chief and his slain comrades, and they gathered the bodies in a heap and burned them with all honors.

The ashes were collected in an urn and buried in a tumulus on which a stone was placed with an inscription written by Panthaka, which contained a brief report of Mahāduta's conversion.

Before Pandu's party returned home, Panthaka held a memorial service at the tumulus in which he explained the significance of Karma, discoursing on the words of Buddha:

“By ourselves is evil done,
By ourselves we pain endure.
By ourselves we cease from wrong,
By ourselves become we pure.

No one saves us, but ourselves,
No one can and no one may :
We ourselves must walk the path,
Buddhas merely teach the way.”¹⁰

“Our Karma,” the samana said, “is not the work of Ishvara, or Brahma, or Indra, or of any one of the gods. Our Karma is the product of our own actions. My action is the womb that bears me; it is the inheritance which devolves upon me; it is the curse of my misdeeds and the blessing of my righteousness. My action is the resource by which alone I can work out my salvation.”¹¹

Then the samana paused and added :

“While every one is the maker of his own Karma, and we reap what we have sown, we are at the same time co-responsible for the evils of evil doers. Such is the interrelation of Karma that the errors of one person are mostly mere echoes of the errors of others. Neither the curse of our failings nor the bliss of our goodness is purely our own. Therefore when we judge the bad, the vicious, the criminal, let us not withhold from them our sympathy, for we are partners of their guilt.”

Among the people of the surrounding villages the tumulus became known as "The Converted Robber's Tomb," and in later years a little shrine was built on the spot where wanderers used to rest and invoke the Buddha for the conversion of robbers and thieves.

‘Who injureth others,
Himself hurteth sore.
Who others assisteth,
Himself helpeth more.
Let th’ illusion of self
From your mind disappear :
And you’ll find the way sure ;
The path will be clear.’

“If you heed my words and obey these injunctions you will, when you come to die, continue to live in the Good Karma that you have stored up, and your souls will be immortalised according to your deeds.”

Devas are spiritual beings, gods, or angels.

This sentiment, though thoroughly Buddhistic, is found also in other religions and seems to grow naturally when a certain moral maturity is reached.

Every one knows the passage in the Gospel according to Matthew: "But I say unto you, Love your enemies"

Lao Tze (V., 44) the sage of China said: 報怨以德 fao yuen t'eh, i. e., "Requite hatred with virtue."

And Socrates expressed himself no less plainly in Plato's Crito, 49:

Οἷτε ἀνταδικεῖν δεῖ, οἷτε κακῶς ποιεῖν οἴδμεν ἀνθρώπων, οἷδ' ἀν' ὁμοίων πάσχει ἰπ' αἰσῶν

One must neither return evil, nor do any ill to any one among men, not even if one has to suffer from them.

Lao-Tze's Tao Teh King

Chinese-English. With Introduction, Transliteration, and Notes.

By DR. PAUL CARUS.

With a photogravure Frontispiece of the traditional picture of Lao-Tze, specially drawn for the work by Mishima Shoso, an eminent Japanese artist. Appropriately bound in yellow and blue, with gilt top. 345 pages. Newly bound set with 29 additional pages of Emendations and Comments. Price, $3.00 (15s.)

Contains: (1) A philosophical, biographical, and historical introduction discussing Lao-Tze's system of metaphysics, its evolution, its relation to the philosophy of the world, Lao-Tze's life, and the literary history of his work; (2) Lao-Tze's Tao Teh King in the original Chinese; (3) an English translation; (4) the transliteration of the text, where every Chinese word with its English equivalent is given, with references in each case to a Chinese dictionary; (5) Notes and Comments; (6) Index.

THE EXTRAORDINARY SIGNIFICANCE OF LAO-TZE.

The translator says, in the Introduction to his Lao-Tze's Tao Teh King, that "No one who is interested in religion can afford to leave it unread." He undertook the labor of editing and translating this wonderful little book for the purpose of helping the English-speaking public "to appreciate the philosophical genius and the profound religious spirit of one of the greatest men that ever trod the earth."

Lao-Tze's Tao Teh King contains so many surprising analogies with Christian thought and sentiment in it that we should deem it written under Christian influence were its authenticity and pre-Christian origin not established beyond the shadow of a doubt. Not only does the term Tao (word, reason) correspond quite closely to the Greek term Logos, but Lao-Tze also preaches the ethics of requiting hatred with goodness. He insists on the necessity of becoming like unto a little child, of returning to primitive simplicity and purity, of non-assertion and non-resistance, and promises that the deficient will be made whole, the crooked will be straightened, the empty will be filled, the worn will be renewed, those who have too little will receive, while those who have too much will be disconcerted. The Tao Teh King is small in size and aphoristic in form, but it is filled to the brim with deep wisdom and sound morality.

Dr. Carus's text edition has additional advantages; it is so arranged that every reader has it in his power to verify the translation, and if he so desires, to study the Chinese language practically in connection with this celebrated classic. Every Chinese word and its English equivalent is given in the transliteration, which thus forms a complete explanation of the Chinese text, and for every word references are given to the exact page of Williams's Dictionary, which is the most accessible, and, in some cases where Williams is insufficient, to the K'anghi, which is the most authoritative. There are also notes on pronunciation and methods of transcription, made by the Rev. Geo. T. Candlin of Tientsin and Dr. Robert Lilley of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. The roots and whole philological history of the words can thus be traced by any reader.

OPINIONS OF CHINESE SCHOLARS.

THE REV. C. SPURGEON MEDHURST, a missionary well known as a Chinese scholar of high repute, says in an article on the Tao Teh King, published in The Chinese Recorder of November 18, 1899:

"For the student missionary perhaps the most useful work is Dr. Paul Carus's edition of the Tao Teh King, published last year (1898) by The Open Court Publishing Co., Chicago. Tastefully gotten up, it contains, in addition to the full text, a transliteration of the whole, with full grammatical and explanatory notes. The scholarly introductions, with the other special features I have mentioned, and a complete index, make this edition of Lao's work the best that has yet seen the light. The translation is spirited and in many places reproduces better than any other the rhythm of the original.

"The average Chinese missionary ought to be more familiar than he is with the thoughts of Lao-Tze. He may supply a lesser number of quotable phrases than the Four Books and the Five Classics, but he is the least racial and most universal writer China has ever produced. A study of him, even in English, will materially add to any man's equipment, though no translation can convey a true conception of the original."

REV. ARTHUR H. SMITH, American Board of Missions, Tientsin, China, writes to Dr. Carus:

"I send you by this mail a few slips of a review of your Lao-Tze. They were published in the N. C. Daily News, the leading journal in China. I also wrote a brief notice for the Biblical World whence the copy came indirectly. Allow me to congratulate you on your capacity for seeing into mill-stones."

One of the enclosed review-slips contains the following passage:

"It goes without saying that the task of obtaining sufficient acquaintance with the Chinese language to translate, under the conditions named, a book like that of Lao-Tze is a gigantic one. Dr. Carus's success is little short of marvellous. He frequently cites the versions of others, none of which happens to be at hand for comparison, but in the extracts given it seems clear that Dr. Carus has succeeded better than Dr. Legge or Dr. Chalmers in the passages where we are able to compare them,—a very remarkable fact, indeed.”—North China Daily News.

TAN TEK SOON, a native Chinese scholar of the Straits Settlement, Singapore, writes :

“I have read the introductory portion with great interest, and must heartily congratulate you upon the accuracy and lucidity of your rendering of a rather obscure work, even to Chinese scholars. In my opinion it is a marvel of literary assiduity and application on a par with Stanislas Julien's Life of Hiuen Tsang, and I am sure it will be as greatly appreciated by scholars.”

PROF. S. WATASE, a native Japanese scientist, formerly of the University of Chicago, writes :

“I thank you heartily for your kindness in sending me a copy of your fine translation and critical exposition of Lao-Tze's Tao Teh King. It was years ago that I read it. Your publication of the Chinese text will be highly appreciated by all who want to make a study of the philosopher. As I read the text and then the translation, I am astonished how well you kept the original terseness and severe brevity in English. It gives me a certain fascination to read the old philosopher through two such divergent media as Chinese and English.”

THE LATE MONSIGNORE C. DE HARLEZ, one of the most prominent Sinologues of these latter days and himself a translator of Lao Tze's Tao Teh King, writes as follows in a book review concerning Dr. Carus's translation :

“Nous donnons volontiers nos éloges, en général, aux connaissances du Dr. Carus et à la manière dont il a exécuté son œuvre.”

In the same article, M. de Harlez explains that Tao should be as little translated by “path,” or “word,” or “reason,” as the verbum of the Gospel should be translated by “word.” In justifying his own interpretation of Lao Tze's terms, he claims that Tao means “le principe producteur et régulateur,” while the negative wuh should not be translated by “non-existence,” or “the void,” but by “the immaterial, the imperceptible.”

A REVIEWER IN THE NORTH CHINA HERALD says :

“There are a good many of us who have worried along in China for a term of years and yet have not come to a realising sense of the wisdom contained in the Tao Teh King. . . . The text of the classic contains only 5320 characters, but its terseness is so extreme that it is in many places susceptible of widely-different interpretation. Unlike some other translators, Dr. Carus has endeavored to preserve in his English rendering something like the rhyme and rhythm of the original. . . . Dr. Carus's book is a truly remarkable achievement.”

PROF. ISAAC T. HEADLAND, of the Peking University, writes :

“I congratulate you most heartily on your interest in and your efforts to open up such a wise old philosopher to the American reading public."

DR. FRIEDRICH HIRTH, Professor of Chinese Language and Literature at Columbia University, New York City, expresses his views in a letter to the author as follows :

"I have not found the necessary leisure to examine your Tao Teh King in detail, but from what I have seen so far, your publication embodies the results arrived at by previous investigators and translators and adds improvements in many respects. I am glad to observe you published the Chinese text and the analysis of it in connection with your English translation, thus giving the critical reader every possibility to check your work. This more than anything else will encourage students to take up this line of research, which claims the highest efforts from the philologist's point of view as well as the philosopher's. Your idea of popularising works of Chinese thought will greatly contribute towards the interest taken in Chinese literature, and the method you have adopted in your representation of the Tao Teh King will serve as an excellent model for similar works of the kind."

MISCELLANEOUS PRESS NOTICES.

"It is a convenient volume through which to make such acquaintance with the Chinese language and Chinese thought as an American scholar must consider desirable in view of the present increased intercourse with the Oriental world."—Reformed Church Review.

"All that one could do to make the immortal

'canon on reason and virtue' alluring to American readers has certainly been done by the author. The translation is faithful, preserving especially the characteristic terseness and ruggedness of style of the original, the type work is superb, the comments judicious."—The Cumberland Presbyterian.

"Dr. Carus's work as editor, translator, annotator is most excellent in every feature."—Western Christian Advocate, Cincinnati, O.

"An indispensable book, and no one who is interested in religion can afford to leave it unread."—New York Herald.

"The book is well gotten up, with striking exterior; while of great importance to the serious student, it is usable and interesting to any one who cares at all for the thought and religions of the Orient."—Professor Frederick Starr, in The New Unity, Chicago.

"Extraordinarily interesting. Of great moment."—The Outlook, N. Y.

"Much labor has been put into this book. It will be a great addition to the knowledge which English readers have of one of the greatest of religious books and religious leaders."—The Church Union, N. Y.

"Nothing like this book exists in Chinese literature; so lofty, so vital, so restful.... We have compared this translation with three others—two English, one German—and have no hesitation in saying it is the most satisfactory and serviceable as well as least expensive now accessible to the public. The bright cover of yellow and blue is very appropriate and suggestive of the Celestial Kingdom."—The Hartford Post.

"In der vorliegenden Arbeit giebt Dr. Paul Carus eine neue, sich an das Original treu anschliessende und doch recht lesbare Uebertragung in's Englische, ein schätzbarer Beitrag zur vergleichenden Religionskunde."—Blätter für literarische Unterhaltung, Leipzig, Brockhaus (No. 34, Feuilleton).

"Kann den Religionsforschern empfohlen werden."—PROF. C. P. TIELE, of Leyden, in Theologischer Jahresbericht, XVIII., p. 447.

"Readers will find much to arouse their thought and admiration in its pages."—Jewish Comment, Baltimore, Md.

"Dr. Carus took a considerable onus on himself when he threw aside all previous renderings of the great thinker Lao-Tze, and embarked on the task that was recently placed before the public. He has trodden boldly over the labors of Legge and Chalmers, not to mention other and lesser lights who have essayed to enter the lists. If his conception is bold, however, his reward seems to have been gained. We have, as a result, what is an excellent translation, open possibly to criticism—but then Sinologues never will lie down together—but withal satisfying."—London and China Telegraph, July, 1899.

There are in addition a number of Japanese periodicals which give careful and detailed reviews of Dr. Carus's translation of the Tao Teh King. We mention among them the Tetsugaku Zasshi (Journal of Philosophy), Tokyo; the Mujinto (Eternal Light), Kyoto; the Bukkyo (i. e., Buddhism), Tokyo, and the Shi do Kwai Kwai Shi (Reports of the Association of Seekers after Truth), Omi.

Chinese Philosophy

Being an Exposition of the Main Characteristic Features of Chinese Thought.

By DR. PAUL CARUS.

Illustrated with numerous diagrams, tables, and other symbols. This essay, which appeared first in The Monist, Vol. VI., No. 2, is an exposition of the main characteristic features of Chinese thought: it is a sketch, not an exhaustive treatise, and still less a history of Chinese philosophy. It purports to serve as an introduction to the intricacies of typically Chinese notions, explaining their symbols and revealing their mysteries in terse and intelligible language. The brevity is intentional, for the essay is meant to give a bird's-eye view of the Chinese world-conception.

While appreciating the remarkable genius exhibited by the founders of the Chinese civilisation, the author points out the foibles of the Chinese and traces them to their source. It is noteworthy that in spite of its candid and unreserved criticism, the essay was well received by the Chinese authorities and was granted the rare honor of being recommended by the Tsungli Yamen of Peking, the Imperial Foreign Office.

In reply to a copy of this article forwarded through the American representative to H. M. the Emperor of China, the Tsungli Yamen, returned the following informal communication:

THE TSUNGLI YAMEN TO THE HON. MR. DENBY.

Informal.

PEKIN, May 6th, 1897.

YOUR EXCELLENCY:

We have had the honor to receive Your Excellency's note, wherein you state that by particular request you send the Yamen a copy of The Monist—an American Magazine. Your Excellency further states that it contains an article on "Chinese Philosophy" and the author asks that it be delivered to H. M. the Emperor.

In reply we beg to state, that the article in question has been translated into Chinese by order of the Yamen and has been duly perused by the members thereof.

The article shows that the writer is a scholar well versed in Chinese literature, and has brought together matters which indicate that he fully understood the subject he has treated.

The book will be placed on file in the archives of the Yamen.

OPINION OF A CHINESE SCHOLAR

A Chinese scholar writes with reference to the communication of the Chinese government as follows:

"When the Tsungli Yamen voluntarily certifies that a Western scholar fully understands Chinese philosophy, and the Book of Changes as an incidental section of the same, it would be well for those who happen to be interested in either of these topics to inquire what he has to say. . . . Suffice it to say that the author made a profound, if not an absolutely incomprehensible, topic to a certain extent luminous, and to an even great degree interesting."

PRESS NOTICES.

"The author gives in his introduction terse and discriminating characterisations of the 'rare mixture of deep thought and idle speculations' which make up the Chinese philosophy, and in his conclusion expresses equally just opinions of China's present unhappy helplessness."—J. M. Foster, Swatow, China, in The American Journal of Theology.

"Valuable and of unquestioned reliability. The delineation of the philosophy that underlies the Chinese civilisation is so ably done in these pages that the reader cannot fail to appreciate the causes which produce Chinese conservatism."—Toledo Blade.

"Will enable Western readers to appreciate more clearly the causes which produce Chinese conservatism, thus explaining many apparent irreconcilable phases of Chinese character and thought. . . . All students of Oriental religion and philosophy will find this study of Dr. Carus a suggestive and valuable contribution to the literature of their subject."—Hartford Post, Hartford, Ct.

GOSPEL OF BUDDHA

With Table of References and Parallels, Glossary, and Complete Index. Cloth, Gilt Top. Price, $1.00.

Some readers of The Gospel of Buddha have asked :
"Is this book genuine Buddhism, or has it been colored by the author's philosophical notions?" There is no better answer to this question than the publication of a few responses that came from to whom the book was submitted for approval.

His Majesty, the King of Siam, sent the following communication through his private secretary:

"DEAR SIR: I am commanded by His Most Gracious Majesty, the King of Siam, to acknowledge, with many thanks, the receipt of your kind letter and the book, The Gospel of Buddha, which he esteems very much; and he expresses his sincerest thanks for the very hard and difficult task of compilation you have considerably undertaken in the interest of our religion.

"I avail myself of this favorable opportunity to wish the book every success."

His Royal Highness, Prince Chandradat Chudhatharn, official delegate of Siamese Buddhism to the Chicago Parliament writes :

"As regards the contents of the book, and as far as I could see, it is one of the best Buddhist Scriptures ever published. Those who wish to know the life of Buddha and the spirit of his Dharma may be recommended to read this work which is so ably edited that it comprises almost all knowledge of Buddhism itself."

The Rt. Rev. C. A. Seelakkhandha, a Buddhist high priest of Dodanduwa, Ceylon, writes as follows :

"The Gospel of Buddha will find a place among the foremost of the English works on Buddhism. My warmest thanks I offer you for giving the public so valuable a book on Buddhism as this."

Mr. A. E. Buultjens, B. A. (Cantab.), the erudite Principal of Ananda College, Colombo, and General Manager of Buddhist Schools, writes :

"I have read the book and like it immensely. I shall use it in our English schools "¹

D. B. Jayatilaka, B. A., Head Master, Buddhist High School, Kandy, Ceylon, writes :

"The book is undoubtedly the best popular work on Buddhism in the English language. Dr. Carus presents an accurate account of Buddhism in his work."

The book has been introduced as a reader in private Buddhist schools of Ceylon. Mrs. Marie M. Higgins, Principal of the Musaus School and Orphanage for Buddhist Girls, Cinnamon Gardens, Colombo, Ceylon, writes as follows :

"It is the best work I have read on Buddhism. This opinion is endorsed by all who read it here. I propose to make it a text-book of study for my girls."

The General Manager of Buddhist schools proposed to introduce the book in the government Buddhist schools of Ceylon, but he was overruled by the government Public Instruction Department. Mr. H.

¹ This statement was published in The Buddhist of Colombo (October 18 1895).

S. Perera, a representative Buddhist of Ceylon, writes to The Open Court Publishing Co. :

" Please let Mr. Carus know that the Government Public Instruction Department is not likely to allow The Gospel of Buddha to be used in the Buddhist schools in Ceylon, and a hot discussion is now going on between the Director and General Manager of Buddhist schools. Should the Director's decision be against the introduction of this highly useful work, our boys will miss a grand opportunity of studying Buddhist tenets in the English garb."

The Buddhist, the Organ of the Southern Church of Buddhism, writes in a review of The Gospel of Buddha :

" The eminent feature of the work is its grasp of the difficult subject and the clear enunciation of the doctrine of the most puzzling problem of ātman as taught in Buddhism. So far as we have examined the question of ātman ourselves from the works of the Southern canon, the view taken by Dr. Paul Carus is accurate, and we venture to think that it is not opposed to the doctrine of Northern Buddhism "

The Rt. Rev. Shaku Soyen, of the Zen sect, Kamakura, Japan, writes :

"A [Japanese] translation of The Gospel of Buddha is just finished. The sacred books of Buddhism are so numerous that its beginners are at a loss how to begin their study, and it has been our endeavor to sketch out Buddha's doctrines plainly and concisely. Your book just fills the place."

A translation of The Gospel of Buddha into Chinese is in preparation.

H. Dharmapala, Secretary of the Maha-Bodhi Society and Editor of the Maha-Bodhi Journal writes :

" You have grasped the spirit of Buddha's teachings, and I am indeed glad that I hear nothing but praise on all sides regarding your book "

"The ethical and philosophical essence of the writings that have descended from the great Teacher you present most delightfully. The book is elevating and fascinating at the same time. The reader will taste some of the effects of the writings of Thomas à Kempis, without being called upon to explore the extreme regions of mysticism to which that author leads."—Maurice Bloomfield, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

"I beg to express to you my very sincere thanks for your courtesy in sending me a copy of your Gospel of Buddha. I am much interested in the endeavor to make Buddhism more accessible in the shape of a collection of extracts from the Buddhist books themselves. It is altogether more desirable a plan than writing about and about the matter. I very much hope that your valuable collection will prove suggestive and lead people to think."—Prof. T. W. Rhys Davids.

It is natural that historians and also Sanskrit or Pāli professors would have preferred a purely historical and merely critical treatment of the subject. Prof. Richard Garbe, of Königsberg, when consulted before the publication of The Gospel of Buddha, expressed his disapproval of the general plan, and vigorously objected to any consideration of North Buddhistic traditions. After having read the book he wrote: "Uebrigens muss ich gestehen, dass das Buch doch den echten Geist des edelsten Buddhismus athmet. Es ist in sehr ansprechender Form geschrieben und ist in hohem Masse geeignet, den Zwecken zu dienen für die es verfasst ist."

"The general reading of such a book as this would have removed a good deal of the intolerance from which we suffer."—The Rev. Dr. John H. Barrow, Chairman of the World's Parliament of Religions.

"I have read it with the greatest pleasure."—Col. R. G. Ingersoll.

PRESS NOTICES.

"Admirably fitted to be a handbook for the single reader or for classes."—Peabody Record, Nashville, Tenn.

"The book will help its reader to a clearer conception of the character of the sweetest of the pagans."—Chicago Evening Post.

"A handsome addition to the publications for which this publishing house has already become noted."—Mirror and Farmer, Manchester, N. H.

"The aim of the volume is to explain the life and doctrines of Buddha in their best form, and it is successfully carried out"—Public Opinion, Washington.

"Of most absorbing interest and of greatest ethical value. . . . A similar compilation of all the ancient religions would make a priceless addition to the reference library. . . . Available for ready reference."—Every Saturday, Elgin, Ill.

"Dr. Paul Carus has admirably collated the teachings of Gautama Buddha, heretofore scattered through the Sacred Books of the East, and nowhere else to be found harmoniously and systematically massed together. It is a work akin to that of the compilers of the Christian Gospels, and deserves recognition as a valuable contribution to the world's knowledge."—The World, New York

"In addition to a very luminous and suggestive preface, he furnishes a table of references, showing at an eye-glance the sources of his extracts and the parallelisms in the Gospels. He gives, also, a glossary of names and terms, a method of pronunciation, and a good index. The simplicity of this presentation, the freedom of the text from notes or uncouth and outlandish diacritical points, and the general arrangement of the work are admirable. . . . It is admirably fitted to be a handbook for the single reader or for classes."—The Critic, N. Y.

'The parallelisms between the Buddhistic and Christian religions are very striking.'—Herald-Advocate, Salem.

'The book is misnamed. Buddha was a noble character; but he taught no Gospel. There is one Gospel, and one only, the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.'—The Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

'The Gospel of Buddha is an excellent compilation. . . . Dr. Carus deserves the thanks of all readers for his painstaking in the preparation of a work so intelligible, so instructive, so practically helpful.'—Cumberland Presbyterian, Lebanon, Tenn.

'The Truth as taught in The Gospel of Buddha has no taint of church or creed. Every house in the land would be the better if a copy of this book was accessible to the children. Paul Carus has given us a valuable book'—Fibre and Fabric, Boston.

'The work is one which should be found on the table of every Christian. . . . A great boon to all Christian as well as Buddhist students. . . . Complete, attractive, highly intelligible, and so useful as a work of reference.'—Washington Educational Review, Tacoma.

'It is the author's avowed purpose to reconstruct his material from a 'religio-philosophical' point of view, as embodying, in common with Christianity, the elements of 'the cosmic religion of truth,' which is, apparently, the religion of Dr. Carus.'—The Watchman, Boston.

'One is tempted at times to believe that some of the facts in the life of Christ on earth are corrupted to fit this religion. . . . Compared with the Gospel of Christ, this story is as water unto wine, as a dim candle by the full-orbed sun.'—The Christian Guide, Louisville

'The best book on the life and doctrines of Buddha. . . . It would be a good thing if all missionaries preparing for work in Buddhist countries would allow Dr. Carus in this book to introduce them to Buddhism.'—The Tibetan, Organ of the Mission Union, Toronto, Canada

'A careful reading of it cannot but broaden one's thought and produce spiritual reflexion. . . . Though many of his [Buddha's] sayings are almost identical with those of the Christ, yet it cannot be compared with His Gospel. . . . Should be read by every student interested in religion.'—The Northwestern, Evanston, Ill

"Like other books by the same author it gives evidence of careful study and deep thought."—Times, Kansas City.

"The book is wonderfully interesting and readable, and every delver into varying theologies should possess a copy."—Bee, Sacramento, Cal.

"This volume meets the demand for accurate knowledge concerning Buddhism, the greatest of Oriental faiths."—Home Journal, New York.

"A useful book to all who are curious to know how little Buddhism resembles Christianity and how superficial and pretentious the tenets of its Gospel."—The Sanitarian, Brooklyn.

"Dr. Carus has skilfully marshalled in this volume enough from the Buddhistic literature to indicate its wealth of subtle imagery and the process of its illuminative insight."—The Conservator.

"No heathen religion can in any way throw light on Christ's religion. . . . This story of Buddhism, as here compiled and abbreviated, can be read with interest, and it is certainly interesting to note the many good things that are found in its code of morals."—Christian Observer, Louisville, Ky.

"Dr. Carus's book will be appreciated by many a student of the religions of the world, who will find here the best thoughts of the great Oriental faith put into readable and understandable shape by a clever, a learned, and a sympathetic scholar. The book is doubly valuable for its table of references, a copious glossary, and full index."—Secular Thought, Toronto.

"A most important contribution to the study of comparative religions. . . . Here is biographical matter, the philosophical foundations, the religious principles, parables, stories, and other interesting information presented in admirable form. . . . To the ministers who are willing to enrich their service with extra Biblical readings this book is especially commended."—Unity, Chicago.

"The resemblance between Buddha's life and doctrines and the life and doctrines of our Lord is remarkable, and will strike the reader all through the book. He will discover that the generally received idea of Nirvāna as nothingness or annihilation is altogether wrong. . . . Our Lord taught much in parables and stories; it was a method of instruction well suited to the minds of the people of the East, and we are glad to see that Dr Carus has given a large selection of the parables and stories of Buddha. There is as much point to them now as in the days of Buddha, and they contain teachings as applicable to modern people as ever they were to the people of India."—The Call, San Francisco, Cal.

"There is here much information concerning Buddhism, which appears not as a religion but as a philosophy, presented as a system, but not as a very valuable one. When we have subtracted the absurdities, we shall not have left much more than a few ethical common-places."—Religious Herald, Hartford, Conn.

"There is much of interest and of profit to be gleaned from this Gospel of Buddha by the Christian people of our land and age. The study of comparative religions is ever growing and ever widening; and works like that of our author hasten the realisation of the grand ideal of a cosmic religion of truth."—Aegis, Univ. of Wis.

"A series of chapters of extracts from the words of Buddha, from what for the Buddhist corresponds to our Bible, so to express it. . . . Its chapters are beautiful in form and noble in sentiment. It is not offered in hostility to Christianity, but for study in connexion with the latter and in the hope of promoting spiritual reflexion. Those who wish to consult such an epitome will find this book worth heed."—The Congregationalist, Boston.

"A volume which many readers will find full of fascinating interest. Dr. Carus is a deeply reverent and earnest student of religion, of all the religions of the world. . . . Buddhism, he of course admits, is a religion which knows of no supernatural revelation. Christianity differs radically from Buddhism in this respect, in that it is not a mere philosophy but a spiritual power. . . . Read with a pretty wakeful discrimination, this is a book which is fitted to widen one's thought as to the religious nature of man everywhere; to convince one of the truth that God has nowhere left himself without witness; and in the end to make the impression more vivid than ever as to the infinite transcendence of the Christ as not merely the teacher but the Saviour of the world."—The Advance, Chicago

FICTION.

The following stories by Dr. Paul Carus characterise important phases of the religious development of mankind :

THE CROWN OF THORNS. A Story of the Time of Christ. Illustrated. Pp. 73. 75c net (3s. 6d. net). The tale is fiction of the character of legend, utilising materials preserved in both the canonical scriptures and the Apocryphal traditions, but giving preference to the former. Jesus is characterised by the impression he makes upon a Galilean gardener. We meet with a messiah of the type of Bar Cochba, Longinus the Roman soldier, Zebidee and his sons, and St. Paul, the great Apostle of the New Religion.

THE CHIEF'S DAUGHTER. A Legend of Niagara. Seven photo-gravures, 13 pen and ink drawings and half-tone illustrations. $1.00 net (4s. 6d.). A story which testifies to the universality of the idea of sacrifice and proves that all the nations are prepared for the reception of Christianity.

EROS AND PSYCHE. Retold after Apuleius. Half-tone reproductions, with ornamental borders, of the famous illustrations of Paul Thumann. Pp. xv, 108. $1.50 net (6s. net). The story characterises the origin of the belief in immortality among the ancient Greeks.

KARMA. A Story of Buddhist Ethics. Third Japanese art edition. Crêpe paper, tied in silk. Quaintly illustrated. 75c (3s. 6d.). A parallel of Christ's injunction "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

NIRVĀNA. A Story of Buddhist Psychology. (This is a companion work to the story Karma.) Illustrated by a Japanese artist. Pp., 93. Cloth, 60c net (3s. net).

AMITĀBHA. A Story of Buddhist Metaphysics. This story appeared in The Open Court, in July, August, and September, 1902. It describes the development of what may be called Buddhist theology, viz., the origin of the idea of Amitābha, the source of spiritual light as the Good Law, which is eternal and omnipresent. The main events and characters of the story, especially King Kanishka and the philosopher Açva-ghosha are historical. (Not yet published in book form)
